8/24/2012

FLY ME TO THE MOON

Our first stop on our homeward journey was in the city of Long Beach, WA.

The city has long been known for its annual kite festival. We have always been here either before or after the festival. This year we lucked out and were here while it was going on. As you can see there are spectacular flights of all different kinds of kites, and there are competitions for all different types of activities with them.

During this time the town is flooded with tourists and kite flying aficionados.

The boardwalk and pier which Long Beach is famous for, is the focal point for food and vendors of all kinds.

This is one of the more colorful events we have attended in our travels.

When we booked our RV Park on the Long Beach Peninsula it was full, so I reserved another one on what I thought was just 8 or 10 miles up the peninsula. We could not find it. When we finally called Thousand Trails Res. We found out that it was on the peninsula coming south from northern Washington. They have no connection, and it was 165 miles to go back around and get onto the upper one. We lucked out and got Long Beach Park. Dave & Bonnie

8/24/2012

#11