After a lazy morning of getting ready to go, we finally left home at 10:00. It was starting to reach the forecast temperature of 101 deg.

We headed downwest on 10 amidst some good traffic and were soon passing thru Pasadena where lunch time caught up with us. It was hard to pass up a good meal so we stopped in the El Torito parking lot and had our own meal! Reaching the Ventura freeway we ran into solid stop and go traffic clear into Santa Barbara.

We had made a reservation at the Thousand Trails camp, Rancho Oso, and had received an overflow parking site only. Arriving at the preserve we found out we could have full hookups after all.

We found that this camp is in a valley that the ocean breezes blow through and it is wonderful. Setting under the awning with the cool breeze and wine and chips is really living it up. This is a nice camp with terraced rows of sites on the side of a hill and all the sites are level and full hookups. There is a beautiful view of the mountains from the site.

We just may stay here a couple of more days. Retired days, that is!
