As I indicated previously, we drove the 57 miles to Dearborn and went to the Ford exhibits. You can buy a two-day ticket for $46. It takes 5 or 6 hours to walk the Village streets and look at all the buildings Henry moved here. The Village was old and we both matched it perfectly. Here again is a task to be done while you are young and in top shape!

We were both so tired that we had to stop and eat dinner at the Cracker Barrel. This chain of restaurants is always looked forward to by us travelers. Any excuse will suffice!

The next day we repeated the drive and saw the museum. It took us about 3 ½ hours to do this place, but it was more interesting to us. Many historical items on display were ones that we have used ourselves. What does that tell you!

We were able to finish early and when we arrived at St. Clair, we drove the river road and looked at all the beautiful expensive homes that were built right on the banks of the St. Clair Waterway. This waterway is the connection between Lake Huron and Lake Erie. All traffic to Lake Michigan and Lake Superior must pass this way. It is very busy.

Tomorrow, we leave for Ontario, Canada. We should be in Canada about 2 or 3 days to say hello to my Canadian cousins.
