

KICKIN BACK!

September 4, 2004

We had only 6 days at La Conner, and had to leave because of the Labor Day crowd. We went to Cultus Lake, British Columbia, CA. until the 7th, when we will go back to La Conner.

The final weeks of the blackberry season are drawing to a close. I have managed to find a quart or two so far and they are very tasty.

We can spend a lot of time watching our family of quail. Mom, Dad, and the six little ones, which live around our site. We can spend a lot of time listening to the breeze sifting thru the trees. We spend a lot of time in Canada in towns like Chiliwack and Preserves for the Blue Herons. We especially like the fresh corn here that they call Peaches and Cream. It is a hybrid and has variegated white and yellow kernels. So far, we have only found it in Canada and Delaware.

While driving around Chiliwack, we came across this strange establishment. We guess that you just place the dog on the concrete and then blast it with the soap and water gun. The vacuums could be used to dry it!

The Cultus Lake Preserve is a beautiful green place, nestled at the foot of a mountain next to a large lake. It is very popular with Canadians. This weekend there were only 6 RV's from the US in the whole park. The rest, Canadian.

We were glad to get back to the US and to the La Conner campground for another week. This week we plan to take a ferry to Friday Harbor in the San Juan Islands. Next week we are invited to a rally with our friends, the Andersons, and their motor home group.
