

THE LONGEST DELIVERY TIME IN THE WORLD

August 7, 2005

It seems kind of odd to detour this far south, but we have time to kill and we have nothing better to do than chase Indian statues!

A travel mentor from the days of yore arranged for us to set up camp outside of Oakley, UT in the yard of a friend of hers. She also arranged for us to join them and some friends for dinner in her cabin, which was across the stream from us.

This turned out to be one of the most idyllic places on the trip! We parked next to her friends' motor home in the driveway and used their electric. We sat on their porch about 20 ft. from a 30 ft. wide stream that was babbling nicely. There were cool trees providing shade all around and along the stream and house. We had an enjoyable evening and in the morning we left for Salt Lake City, and we located the statue in the town of Murray, UT, at their park.

We then headed north to Idaho Falls where our last Indian of the trip resides. Then we will drive up to Ennis, MT and await the computer delivery at the home of friends.

We have been here 4 days now, and the computer arrived a couple of days ago. It is a major chore to load everything back into it.

The biggest chore is to catch up on all the journals that were handwritten while waiting for the new one. I am just about caught up to the point where I was at when it crashed.

We will point the motor home towards Canada next.
