DOES ANYBODY ELSE DO THIS?

We started out early in the morning to find the Pennsylvania Indian statue. It was so easy because it was in a Rest Area Welcome Center. Wrong! The rest area was the 1st exit entering the state and we were at the last exit leaving the state. Back here, many exits are 3 or 4 miles between them.

In the motorhome, and towing, I just knew that this particular back road would do the job. Guess what! Ten miles later, and in Ohio, we found the freeway that led back into Pennsylvania. At least the statue was there.

Now we had to go further into Pennsylvania to find an exit so we could turn around and head back into Ohio! So far today we had gone 51 miles, and were still within 6 miles of the campground we had left.

Bonnie asked what the yellow circle was on the Dunkirk, New York map. It was another statue we wanted to see, and we had just passed by it within 3 miles of the thruway we were on yesterday!

After a lot of agonizing discussion, we decided that we could never forgive ourselves if we didn't return for that one! Here is his photo. After all, that is what this trip is all about.

It was only 120 miles each way, about what a trip to San Diego from home would be, so we went back to the campground and parked the rig for a couple of more days, and took the car the next day. We have to keep from telling ourselves, it's too late!
