

9/27/2013

THE RAIN HAS FLED THE SCENE

In Florence, OR we visited Kimberlee again in her new house on the hill, and we had a wonderful time as always.

The time came to leave for more southern climes, and lo and behold the rain quit raining.

We made it to Brookings, OR and as you can see, this is the view out the front of our site at the Beachfront RV. It is so pleasing, we added an extra day to this stay.

The other pic is of the always beautiful coastline. You pass miles and miles of these “haystack” rock formations that are unique to the Oregon coast. If you wonder why there are none on the California coastline, this is why. Millions of years ago a volcano eruption formed this debris all along the Oregon coast which has eroded to its present state.

The volcano did not spread this debris along the California coast. So there!

Dave & Bonnie

#20

9/27/2013