

IDLING THRU IDAHO

I guess it's that time of the year, that is computer crash time! We were in Osoyoos, BC and the computer lost the ability to boot up. I have an old one I use for GPS and at least I can enter the journals and send them when we get home and fix the crashed one.

We crossed the border south of Creston, BC and were glad to be back in the USA. Hwy 95 for the most part is a 2-lane road thru many hills and passes. Closer to Coeur D' Alene the scenery consists of massive areas of wheat growing lands. As far as one can see, are fields of harvested and/or planted wheat. The farm machinery is huge and exists by the dozens in their parking areas.

We spent a couple of nights at a beautiful State Park called Hells Gate, which is located in Lewiston, ID. right on the river.

Our next stop was in Caldwell, ID. Here we unsuccessfully tried to locate a classmate from high school. After 4 phone calls, we considered that she being as old as us, was probably dead!

In one of the RV parks, we saw this! I thought it was a unique way to walk your dog.

We then proceeded to Twin Falls, ID, which the highway bypasses now, so we stayed in Eden. Not the Garden of. So no Adam and Eve around. Our friends in Park City, UT were irrevocably committed so we move on to Nephi, UT. The traffic thru Salt Lake was very busy.
