

A SMALL SLICE OF BRYCE

Leaving our small RV Park in Hatch UT. we made the 5 1/2 hr round trip to Bryce Canyon National Park.

It is a unique park with many beautiful views, most of them, one has to get out of the car and walk to a viewpoint and look downward. This photo is from the Ponderosa viewpoint.

The roads were good and all sights well marked. Most all of the Park viewpoints are at 8,000 to 9,000 ft. elevation. This has a habit of making old folks huff and puff and get a little dizzy! This photo is of a formation called Natural Bridge. The geology of the area, the special weather and freezing, creates what are called Hoodoos. These vertical formations are constantly being formed as others are crumbling into clay. Mother Nature works in strange ways!
