On the Road Again!

After packing the motorhome to a chock full status we started down the pike, so to speak. It was immediately noticeable that the refrigerator was not staying lit.

We decided to go by Giant RV to have them look at it. Sure enough the burner was loaded with crud and the gas would not light. They fixed it and we left about 10:00 AM.

Getting thru LA, the traffic lessened and we arrived at the coastline where it was a lovely 70 degrees! The heck with the inland route where it is 90+.

Passing herds of Pelicans flying in formation along the cliff edges we decided to eat lunch at the beach by the Ventura County Park location. A stiff breeze off the ocean and the crashing of the waves made for a pleasant lunch.

To the Ocean HO!

We decided to stop at Andersons Pea Soup for a couple of quarts of soup to go.

The weather continued to be cool like in the 60s and we thought of you all at home in the heat!

Looking for a RV park around San Luis Obispo we turned down a road to Avila Beach and turned onto a road to Port Luis. The Diablo Canyon Nuclear Power plant was at the end of the road as was the harbor and all the fishing boats.

We were allowed to park on turnouts which were about 20 feet from the waters edge. The surf growled all night and it was 61degrees in the AM.

We walked to the pier and then had coffee at the Fat Cat.
